Home Décor

Our home decor is the result of reimagining the traditional design process, where waste becomes a resource, and every element serves a purpose beyond its initial use.

Our products are crafted from bio-composite materials integrated with agricultural waste to derive lower-carbon footprint home decor products that are lightweight and durable.

We have transformed by-products and waste materials into timelessly elegant accessories of high value and notable substance that can be used as impressive eco-luxury packaging. They all enhance their original raw materials and follow the principles of strength and durability. We do not do single-use products.

Our Upcycled Materials

Our collection is made of innovative upcycled materials that allow us to create beautiful objects, reducing waste in the process by transforming left overs into marketable products. These are our unique materials :

Husk is made of rice husks discarded as part of the milling process in agriculture. It is a highly stable material with exceptional longevity and durability. The bio-composite Husk allows us to create objects that are both appealing and environmentally friendly while reducing waste from rice agriculture.

Cocco is made from coconut fibers. The original strands of the shell give the material an organic feel and strength. With a production of over one million tonnes annually, a large amount of coconut waste is produced in Thailand. By upcycling it, we contribute to a better environment.

E-marble is made from discarded egg shells. Unwanted eggshells are cleaned and crushed, combined with a binding agent and formed into shapes. They have the appearance of terrazzo and apart from natural tones, colours of blue and charcoal are produced using plant-based dyes.
